Number 1, January 1981

Leading articles
Change of Editor—I. Phillips 1
Multiple antimicrobial drug resistance in enteric pathogens—B. Rowe and E. J. Threlfall 3

Opinion
Interpretation of the agar diffusion method for bacterial susceptibility testing
S. Arvidson, K. Dornbusch and H. Ericsson 5

Review article
New naturally occurring β-lactam antibiotics and related compounds
A. G. Brown 15

Original articles
Properties of three carbenicillin-hydrolysing β-lactamases (CARB) from Pseudomonas aeruginosa: identification of a new enzyme
R. Labia, M. Guionie, M. Barthelemy and A. Phillipson 49

Bacterial filamentation and in vivo efficacy: a comparison of several cephalosporins
D. M. Ryan and D. Monsey 57

Comparative activity of BRL 25.000 with amoxycillin against resistant clinical isolates
H. W. Van Landuyt, M. Pyckavet and A. M. Lambert 65

Effects of method of antibiotic administration on extravascular penetration: cross-over study of cefazolin given by intermittent injection or constant infusion
L. R. Peterson, D. N. Gerding and C. E. Fasching 71

Comparative toxicity of gentamicin versus tobramycin: a randomized prospective study
I. W. Fong, R. S. Fenton and R. Bird 81

Vancomycin therapy of experimental pneumococcal meningitis caused by penicillin-sensitive and resistant strains
T. R. Beam 89

Correspondence
Localized inhibition of clindamycin-2-phosphate hydrolysis due to product inhibition by inorganic phosphate—J. I. Blenkharn and J. H. Darrell 101

The role of inducible β-lactamases in the antagonism seen with certain cephalosporin combinations—K. P. Fu and H. C. Neu 104

Cefuroxime concentrations in pericardial fluid—N. Martini, L. Xerri and V. Puchetti 107

Aminoglycoside antibiotics and inhibition of the pendular movements of the intestine—A. G. Paradells 109

Clavulanic acid and respiratory infection—D. E. Roberts and P. Cole 112
